PREFACE.

THIS list includes proceedings in the Court of Star Chamber of the following reigns :—

Henry VII.—A bundle of bills, answers, depositions, &c. now listed for the first time.

Henry VIII.—(1) Sixteen bound volumes of similar documents, previously listed in MS. (Nineteenth Report of the Deputy-Keeper of the Public Records, p. 18).

(2) Ten bundles, numbered consecutively with the preceding, a list of which has been printed in the Forty-ninth Report of the Deputy-Keeper, p. 376, et seq.

(3) Eight bundles now listed for the first time.

Edward VI.—Six bundles, and

Philip and Mary—Eleven bundles, all now listed for the first time.

The older lists have been revised and rendered uniform for incorporation with the present one; but all existing references have been scrupulously preserved. Documents belonging to other reigns than those stated in the old lists are described at the end of those reigns.

To avoid delay in publication, no attempt has been made to arrange the suits in any order; but it is hoped that the “county” column, together with the numerous cross references, will afford ready means of tracing information about any particular family or place.

The Decrees and Orders of the Court of Star Chamber have, with two or three exceptions, entirely disappeared, and the value of the surviving records for legal purposes is therefore much diminished; but with regard to persons, places, habits, and manners, they are full of information.

The Acts of Parliament relating to the constitution and jurisdiction of the Court of Star Chamber within this period are as follows:—

3 Henry VII, c. 1.*—Empowers the Chancellor, with six other high officials, to summon before them and punish persons impeding the orderly government of the realm by unlawful maintenances, giving of liveries, signs, and tokens, and retainers by indentures, promises, oaths, and writings, or other embraceries, untrue demeaning of sheriffs in the returns and panels of juries, and riots and unlawful assemblies.

19 Henry VII, c. 14.—Allowing process against unlawful retainers before the Chancellor or Keeper of the Great Seal in the Star Chamber, the King in his Bench, or the King and his Council attending on his person. (This Act expired at the King's death.)

21 Henry VIII, c. 16.—Confirming a decree made by the King's Council in the Star Chamber to regulate the practice of handicrafts, &c. by aliens.

21 Henry VIII, c. 20.—Adding the President of the Council to the court established by the Act of 3 Henry VII.

25 Henry VIII, c. 1, clause 2.—Directing that persons disobeying the orders of justices of the peace, &c. as to the sale of fat cattle, be punished by the King and his Council in the Star Chamber.

33 Henry VIII, c. 1.—Allowing process against obtainers of money, &c. by means of false tokens, either by witnesses before the Lord Chancellor, or by examination of witnesses or confession taken in the Star Chamber before the King's Council.

4 & 5 Philip and Mary, c. 8.—Enacting that the Queen's Council in the Star Chamber may determine cases of abduction of unmarried women and impose fines.

Besides the above, the Act 31 Henry VIII, c. 8, by its clauses 4 and 5, constituted the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Chancellor, and 24 other high officials (13 to be a quorum) as a court to judge breaches of royal proclamations, and to award punishment as therein provided. This Act is generally understood to refer to the Star Chamber, though it does not mention the name. It is very like the Act of 3 Henry VII; and various informations for breaches of proclamations occur in the following list.

* This is the Act often referred to as the origin of the Court of Star Chamber. It is noteworthy, however, that the name of the Star Chamber does not occur in the Act itself, but only in the marginal heading of the Parliament Roll, which, with those of the Acts following it there, is in a different hand from the body of the roll. The King's Council itself at the time of this enactment, and for many years previously, sat in a chamber of the Palace of Westminster, known as the "Starred Chamber."

But the court did not limit itself to the matters assigned to it by the above Statutes. This appears from the Act 21 Henry VIII, c. 16, quoted above, and is confirmed by the proceedings themselves. True, in the great majority of the suits, some kind of violence is alleged, thus bringing them within the Act of Henry VII; but we also find such subjects as heresy (Henry VIII, Vol. II, No. 267) and perjury (Philip and Mary, Bundle XI, No. 43, and Bundle V, No. 14).

There might at first sight appear to be another means of learning the scope of the court from the frequent allegations by defendants that the actions against them ought not to be decided by it, but by the King's Bench or some other court; but the loss of the decrees leaves us ignorant in what cases the court accepted this view. Further, in marked contrast, for instance with the practice in the Court of Requests, such a plea hardly ever constitutes the whole defence; which makes it probable that it was little more than a matter of form, like the allegations of malice, &c. accompanying it, and that the jurisdiction of the Court of Star Chamber was even then not easy to determine.

The list contains a small number of Crown suits; in a few other cases the plaintiff is a royal officer, such as a yeoman of the King's chamber, who does not allege any interest of his own; and one or two professional informers make their appearance towards the end of the reign of Henry VIII. But as a rule the suits are between private parties, and bear a strong resemblance, in the matters disputed and the position of the litigants, to the Chancery suits of a hundred and fifty years before. The fact that few, especially of the earlier suits, show any traces of long delay, suggests that the court may have been resorted to simply to secure despatch. We are thus entitled to conclude that its existence was at this time justified by its value to the subject, irrespective of any political purposes to which it may have been turned by the Crown.

This List has been prepared by MR. J. B. W. CHAPMAN, of this Department, who has also made the foregoing notes.
